JIRA Modernization

Challenges:

- Product development goals required extensive frontend architecture needs
- Several large product releases were upcoming with tight deadlines
- Needed to move platform to JIRA for modernization
- Competitive software space increased pressure for high quality, timely releases
- Needed to create a more efficient sprint process

KMS Impacts:

KMS brought specialized domain and frontend architecture knowledge to successfully release several large products, built from scratch.

With KMS's tried and true processes, KMS scrum teams integrated well with internal development teams, consistently meeting sprint goals and increasing efficiency in the scrum process.

KMS's flexible model allowed for easy ramp up and ramp down according to various project needs, bringing experienced developers to the table very quickly.

A successful move to JIRA and high-quality development work produced products with a great look and feel and user experience, ultimately leading to an acquisition by NMI.

KMS members are part of the team, and we've had a long relationship for a reason. When we were aggressively investing in our product, KMS delivered high-quality software development quickly, allowing us to stand out from the rest of the pack.
